He photographs couples of twins in many of his works. Also this series of photographs of artists is based on the double, working on pairs of images or on the double somehow underlying in the same photo. I start this text on De Angelis' work from a homage to Annemarie Sauzeau and to Alighiero Boetti. [...] Photography itself is a twin double of reality, but it is an awry double, never a real mirror image. This seems to be Giovanni De Angelis' guideline in his work, especially in the works on twins and in this series of portraits of artists. Giovanni De Angelis was born in Naples in 1969. He has been living in Rome since 1992. He is interested in the phenomena involving his generation, just the one of the artists he photographs, from the ones of his same age or a little older to the youngest. For instance, when after looking into the great metropolises in India and Japan, he went to Tel Aviv, a city of..."
